Attention, Mr. Sydney P. Noe, Sec'y.

Gentlemen:

I have in my possession a rare coin, a United States one cent piece, dated 1793, showing the head of the Goddess of Liberty with flowing hair, the strawberry spray directly above the date and with wreath. I enclose herewith rub of both sides of this coin, which will give you a very good idea of what it is like.

Will you kindly give me a quotation on the value of this coin and, if possible, tell me how I may communicate with a possible buyer?

Thanking you, I am

Yours very truly,

Edw. J. Hawley

Dear Sir:

You have apparently a very nice cent, if one can judge from the rubbing. It, however, is not the strawberry leaf. It is not especially rare, only its condition would make it worth a few dollars. Unfortunately there are many very fine electrotypes and we can tell you absolutely nothing without seeing it. If you care to send it on we will look at it and make you an offer for it.

Very truly yours,
